Contested Divorce Case Completed

Superior Court in Session Entire Afternoon Hearing Evidence and Arguments—Judge Reed Reserved His Decision.

Judge Reed came here especially on Monday noon to hear the Wright contested divorce case, which was started on Friday. The session of the superior court was opened at one o'clock in session for five hours, by which time the matter was completed and the judge reserved his decision.

As the first witness Monday, Attorney Desmond for the defense called Mrs. Olive W. Platt, who had visited the Wright house to get the rent and always found it clean and Mrs. Wright of neat appearance.

Mrs. Wright then resumed the stand and her cross examination was continued by Attorney Douglass. She told of Mrs. Wilton's first visit and denied going to Jack's restaurant with Mrs. Wilton or with anyone else. She had eaten there. She denied having trouble with her husband in Worcester. One night he came home early when one of the clubs to which she belonged was meeting with her. They had beer and he joined them and met the first witness, Mrs. Wilton. She returned with her from Worcester after Christmas, 1902, and Mr. Wright welcomed them and took them home in a hack. She denied drinking to excess. She told of Mr. Wilton calling on his wife at her house one night. She denied going to any restaurants after attending the theater or that any one brought her cigarettes or sandwiches. She was recommended to Mrs. Daniels' house by Attorney Franklin H. Brown, her husband's lawyer. For two years she had received no money from her husband. She told of consulting several lawyers here.

Judge Brown testified that he wrote letters for Mrs. Wright to her husband. He received no pay and could not recall just the circumstances, but it was done to help her. These letters were given to her by the first witness. She was submitted to show the dates it was claimed she was in Norwich, although in his testimony following Judge Brown Attorney Pettis stated that he didn't feel sure that Mrs. Wright was here when he wrote all the letters.

Attorney H. H. Pettis was called and testified to writing letters to Mr. Wright for Mrs. Wright while he was in Worcester. They were admitted to show the dates she was here.

James Burke, hackman in Norwich for forty-seven years, testified that he knew Mrs. Wright was. He declared that he never took her in a hack with any man not her husband. He drove her to Mrs. Vetter's once from the station.

Mrs. Emma L. Vetter testified to being a neighbor of Mrs. Wright and that her house was in good condition. Mrs. Wright stayed with her at different times when visiting her after going to Worcester.

VISITS LOCAL COMPANIES.

Makes Thorough Inspection of All the Equipment and Tests Them by Squads in Drilling—Basketball Game.

This inspection is in anticipation of the visit by the officer of the regular army, who comes in February.

All the equipment of the companies was looked over thoroughly, the rifles and blanket rolls carefully inspected, both companies were drilled and there were drills by squads and guard duty, in which proficiency was shown. Both companies turned out large numbers, and the inspection was decidedly satisfactory. The books of each company were also looked over and an account taken of the equipment on hand. The inspector also demonstrated the use of the new form, which was recently referred to.

The inspector spoke well of the condition he found the companies in and complimented Captain Tarbox on the condition he found the rifles of the Fifth company in.

Following the inspection there was a basketball game between teams representing the two companies, which was decidedly interesting. Lieut. Burdick was referee. The full score was 10 to 6 in favor of the Fifth company.
